

Bio

Jennifer has been speaking to homeschool moms since 2007. In that time, many women have shared their struggles with her and she's learned the struggles are similar. That's why Jennifer shares with transparency the fun, failures, and heart-aches she's had while homeschooling her children. Her true passion is fulfilled when the mom who feels alone or defeated is encouraged.

Jennifer likes to think of her life as entering career number three. Still homeschooling her youngest, she's also writing a book about homeschooling, has her own blog and writes for the Wholly Loved website.

In staying with the homeschool and writing community, she serves on the board of North Metro Music Education, a nonprofit that supports music education for homeschool students. She is also the president of the Woodstock, Ga chapter of Word Weavers Intl.

Her heart and home are full where she lives with her husband of twenty-five years, two sons, a daughter, and two cats.
